Flock Cameras: For Protection or Surveillance?

Riverside County leads the nation in the number of Flock Cameras installed with around 10,000 (See Pic., P.6). But now there are questions arising from their use. Who is allowed to access the data collected? Are law-abiding citizens protected from potential mis-use?

Are there examples of Flock Cameras catching Bad Guys?

Flock says their cameras are, "able to capture vehicles traveling up to 100mph, day and night, and up to 75 ft away". Flock claims that it helps them to solve and reduce crime across the country, but in real life, more cameras do not equate to less crime.

According to futurism.com, "Atlanta, Georgia has experienced ...over 5,000 various Flock cameras now blanketing the city. Yet as bomb-shell data released by the FBI shows, the city's massive web of surveillance has had virtually zero impact on the Atlanta Police Department's ability to solve crime..."

Resolving crimes have "actually decreased between 2021 and 2025, when the city's ALPR build-out hit its full stride...in 2025, the APD was solving just one in ten cases of auto theft, even with thousands of Flock ALPRs at its disposal."

No Clear Rules

It appears that Flock - or whoever Flock allows - can access the data collected on license plates.

What determines who they allow to see the data?

Technically, not everyone is allowed to see the data collected, but, apparently, anyone can ask for the information on a license plate to see everywhere that car has driven. Sound Orwellian? - like 1984? (The book by George Orwell on a dystopian story told with animals in a farmyard.)

It may even sound like I'm trying to ignite emotions, but apparently concerns are real enough that Savannah, Georgia fired six of their police officers for concerns about their Flock Cameras In Highgrove Cont. P.6

Riverside County
Supervisor, District 1
Office

Email:
District1@Rivco.org

Dear District 1 Residents,

I want to give you a quick update on several important investments and projects approved by the Riverside County Board of Supervisors today that will benefit communities across District 1.

Market Street Bridge Replacement

Today, the Board approved moving forward with construction bidding for the $55.4 million Market Street Bridge Replacement Project connecting Jurupa Valley and Riverside. The project is 88.53% federally funded and represents a major investment in improving transportation infrastructure in our communities.

Highgrove Railroad Quiet Zone Study

The Board approved up to $115,000 for a Highgrove Railroad Quiet Zone Study. This is an important step toward exploring solutions to railroad noise and addressing quality-of-life concerns raised by Highgrove residents.

Investing in District 1 Community Organizations

We also approved $27,500 in Community Improvement Designation funding for seven organizations serving residents throughout District 1. The funding supports organizations working with children, seniors, families, victims of crime and other members of our community.

These are the kinds of investments I will continue to fight for as your Supervisor: safer and better roads, stronger infrastructure, improved quality of life and resources for the organizations serving our residents.

Thank you for allowing me to serve as your Supervisor and for continuing to share your priorities with me and my team.

Jose Medina

Common Spice or Miracle Super Food?

When I studied at Huntington College of Health Sciences (HCHS.edu - now the only accredited-Nutrition University in the nation) I took a class on herbs that had me dig deep into the research on a common spice that had fabulous, anti-apoptotic action in the body.

Ginger is well known for helping prevent or stop nausea - and there is a lot of research to prove it - especially among cancer patients suffering from the nausea that is such a common side effect of

Sprouting Ginger

Ginger Rhizomes and Plants

Ginger is great in lemon water. If you purchase organic, it is very easy to grow. If not organic, ginger can be irradiated (legally allowed in conventional), which can prevent it from sprouting.

The above ginger plant I grew here in Highgrove, but the kind of ginger I'd like to try next, I have only seen in Botanical Gardens in Hawaii (see top of article pic). It is called, "Shampoo Ginger" or Awapuhi, and yes, at one time used as shampoo!

HIGHGROVE HAPPENINGS

Highgrove Community Improvement Project
Supervisor Medina reviewed several Highgrove Community Improvement Projects approved for funding based on the 2025 survey results:

- * Development of a Highgrove Community Investment Plan*
- Funding for annual maintenance of community landscaping improvements
- * A Railroad Quiet Zone Feasibility Study for the Main Street, Center Street, and Villa Street railroad crossings.* (as we went to print, this study was approved for funding by the Board of Supervisors see P. 3 Editor's Note - Grateful for better sleep, but a $100,000 study?!)

The ACLU is so up in arms about this most widely used ALPR (Automatic License Plate Reader) systems that they have a campaign, "Get the Flock out of Here!" to pass bills to control the use of ALPRs

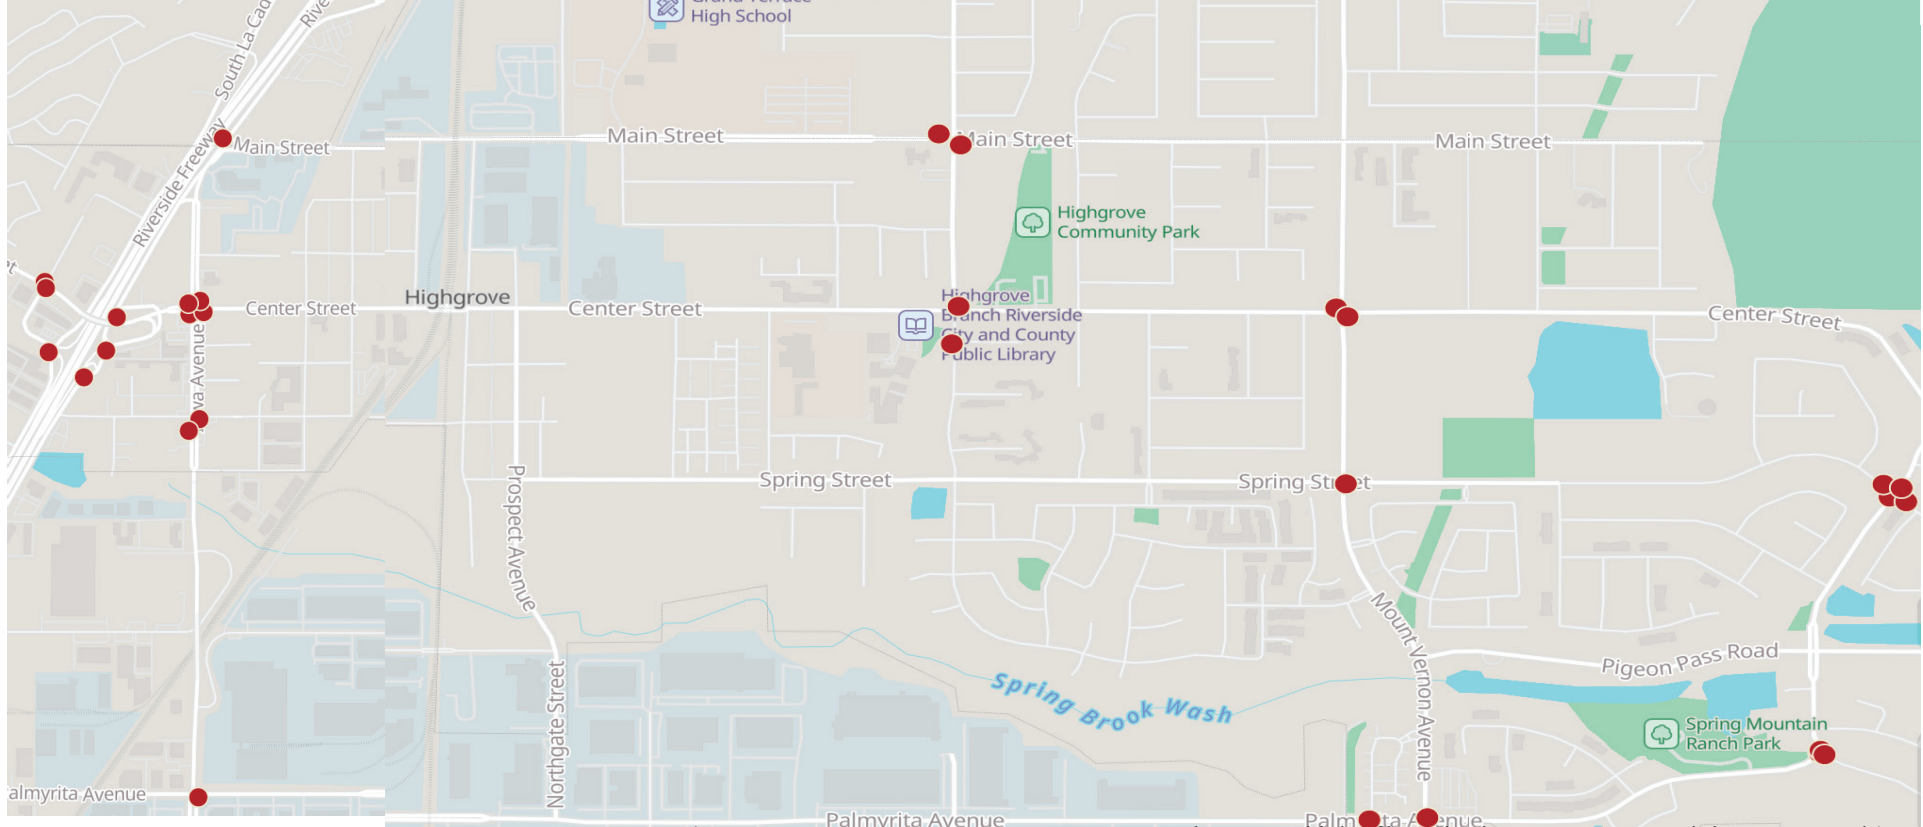

They claim that, "It doesn't matter which company has its creepy cameras in your neighborhood; they all have the same problems:

- *Lack of oversight / accountability for abuse
- *Lack of transparency and regulation into how they collect store and use our data

"Just think about how much someone could learn about your life if cameras constantly tracked where you drove..." They also claim that a mother and her children were held at gunpoint (CBS said there also was a man and his younger brother) and lawsuits ensued, because ALPR cameras wrongly flagged her car as stolen.

Could this be a violation of our fourth amendment rights to prevent unreasonable searches?
